COMMUNITY GROUP LEADER ESSENTIALS

There are many things that are important to lead a successful community group, but we've found that these five things are most important.

Fill up First.

Make your own relationship with God a priority before leading others.

Prioritize Relationships.

Be available and interested in group members' lives inside and outside of group. Think relationships first, curriculum second. Promote participation and facilitate conversation during group.

Be Predictable.

Always start and end on time. After the 3-week grace period, our groups are closed. Predictability builds trust.

Serve Together.

Teaches people to love others while strengthening the relationships within the group.

Replace Yourself.

By developing someone else to lead, you sharpen your own skills and create opportunity for new community groups.
